LCCPA Student Spotlight: Mallorie Larsen

“Don’t be afraid of the challenges because the rewards can be GREAT. If you won’t face the challenges, be prepared to face the consequences which in reality limit your FUTURE OPPORTUNITIES.”
--Mallorie Larsen

Advice to the freshmen “Mallorie Larsen”

Don’t limit yourself because you are afraid of not doing well or the fear of judgment from others. It’s okay to be a leader even if people are threatened.

What direction do you see the LCCPA going?

The next two years might be filled with more Volk lectures but after that, there will be a good balance in all the career pathways. The opportunity for students inside and outside the building seems to be really expanding.

What regrets do you have?

I worried too much about what people thought of me and how I did in school. I learned that it is not about impressing others but doing your very best.

What students are you most in awe of?

Hannah Rambo seems to handle all of her commitments without being stressed out and she never complains. Alyse Franck works extremely hard even if it is something she doesn’t care about.

What is the defining moment in your life?

Sophomore year, I faced the haunting issue of the abuse that I endured in my earlier years. My mom and step dad showed me unconditional love that helped me through this painful time.

What is fun?

Being with people I love and care about. Watching movies and hanging out. I am easily amused. I like trying new stuff and going up north.

The LCCPA has:

Been a place that allowed me to grow emotionally, academically, personally. If I was going to fall, I knew I would have all the support I needed. A great place to grow!

What is the amazing thing you have witnessed in the LCCPA?

Watching my classmates struggle and overcome those struggles. We would cry freshman year because we were so overwhelmed and we now handle our responsibilities much better.

You recently spoke at the partner breakfast, what would you most want our business/industry partners to understand about the LCCPA?

How much we appreciate the opportunities our partners present to us. Also, that we are working really hard and as students, we don't take for granted all the time, money and resources they invest in us.

Describe your future endeavors

I will be attending UW-Green Bay majoring in biology and minoring in human development. I will then proceed onto medical school. I want to keep volunteering and keep involved in the things I enjoy.

Mallorie lives with her mom (Julie) dad (Paul), brother (Tyler), dogs (Daisy and Piper), cats (Nala and Emma). Her favorite color is teal. She is terrified of fish and birds. "I really like to win. I would rather watch an action movie than a chick flick. French fries and ice cream are my friends."

LCCPA Business Students Visit the Packers!

By: Emma Wyngaard [2018]

On Wednesday April 20th, the students in the business pathway went on a career experience to Lambeau Field. We began our day at 8:30 by meeting our tour guide and getting a detailed tour of the Lambeau Field facility. It was clear our tour guide was passionate about his job and he gave us many interesting facts about the Packers and their home. He explained how the Packers originated and how much they've grown since Curly Lambeau started the team.

The tour was amazing, and so was the feeling of walking out onto Lambeau field as a temporary Packer, but afterwards it was time to talk business. We were taken upstairs to a suite where they had a presentation set up for us. We took our seats and the presenters took turns telling us about their positions.

We heard from Joan Malcheski first. She is the director of brand and marketing at Lambeau Field. She has many tasks to complete in her position, an example would be protecting the look of the Packer "G" and making sure it's used appropriately. Next we heard from Meaghan Lynch, she is the marketing specialist for 1919 Kitchen and Tap, the new restaurant at Lambeau. She told us about her responsibilities as a link between the Packers and Delaware North. Next, Peggy Prebelski, the director of retail operations, spoke to us and told us all about the different kinds of revenue they bring in, especially through the Pro Shop. Finally, we heard from Jennifer Ark, the director of stadium services, and she explained what sort of events they do to keep people interested in Lambeau Field.

Overall the experience was a fun trip that was packed with helpful information. The trip was a success and helped show how important a large business department is to a corporation like the Packers.
